Subject: Request: More Information on the Superintendent's Student Advisory Council

Hello,

The update on the Superintendent's Student Advisory Council has many parents upset. The work being done by the Superintendent and the board member Anne Marie appear to be self-serving their personal egos to get press versus to the benefit of the students and their mental health and well-being. We were horrified you self glorified the newspaper articles you received. That is not a healthy way to spotlight our kids.

The topics of Late Start and Inclusion are serious topics that are public lighting rods for debate, and we are putting our children front and center to further the self-interests of adults. Who the heck picked those topics? Why is it that only the Superintendent and one board member get to sweep down to micro-manage these highly emotionally charged topics? The fact that the principals are not involved and surveys are being created that will be "pranced" for more press is pretty reckless.

We would like to have all correspondence associated with the topic of Superintendent's Student Advisory Council forwarded to us. We'd like to see the motivation of how this got started, why the process of creating surveys is not available to the public, why principals are not involved and why is a board member involved at this level with our students.

Please forward us all e-mails, documents and exchanges to include those created by Ted Knight and all e-mails from Anne Marie Rosen on the topic of Superintendent's Student Advisory Council. In addition, we don't feel the creation of the survey should continue until parents, principals and other parent associations are fully on-board with engagement.

Don't leverage our children as press pawns for these controversial topics. You are creating additional mental stress for the student body. Can we please heal versus continuing throwing more gasoline on the fire with all the debates and hate. The board meetings are very divisive and we don't want our kids to be part of that dysfunction.
